

NBCUniversal

RESPECT IN THE WORKPLACE POLICY

Film Production

Our core values at NBCUniversal include doing the right thing and treating people the right way. Living up to that standard requires everyone — job applicants, co-workers, clients, freelancers, contractors, and other business partners — to be treated with dignity and respect. By embracing our differences, we foster a creative and collaborative environment where everyone can do their best work. In support of our core values, the Company prohibits discrimination, harassment, bullying, and retaliation by all individuals, regardless of their position or tenure.

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY

The Company is committed to making employment decisions — such as hiring, promotions, compensation, work assignments, training opportunities, and corrective action or discipline — based on merit, qualifications, business needs, and other job-related criteria, without regard to race, color, religion, creed, ethnicity, national origin or ancestry, citizenship or immigration status, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, gender and gender identity or expression (including transgender status for those who are transitioning or have transitioned), marital status, age, mental or physical disability, genetic information, military or veteran status, or any other characteristic applicable law protects (“protected characteristics”).

DISCRIMINATION PROHIBITED

The Company prohibits discrimination against applicants and employees based on any protected characteristic. Similarly, discrimination based on the perception that an applicant or employee has a protected characteristic or associates with someone who has or is perceived to have a protected characteristic violates this policy.

HARASSMENT PROHIBITED

The Company will not tolerate harassment based on a protected characteristic of its employees or job applicants by other NBCUniversal employees or by non-employees (such as contractors, vendors, clients and guests). Similarly, the Company will not tolerate such harassment of non-employees by NBCUniversal employees. These concepts apply to conduct that occurs in the workplace or in work-related settings, or that otherwise has an impact on the work of an individual protected by this policy or on the Company’s business interests or reputation.

Harassment is a type of discrimination. It includes conduct that creates a disrespectful, intimidating, hostile, degrading, or offensive work environment for another individual based on one or more of the protected characteristics listed above. This type of mistreatment, when directed at someone who is perceived to have or who associates with someone having a protected characteristic, also may be harassment. Everyone has the right to work in an environment free of unlawful harassment including, but not limited to, sexual harassment. Because our goal is to provide an inclusive work environment for everyone, conduct that does not qualify as unlawful harassment may still violate this policy.

Examples: Harassment can take many forms. It can be verbal, physical, or environmental. Identifying what is harassment involves reviewing the specific situation, but the following examples illustrate some of the types of conduct that may violate this policy:

- Derogatory, ridiculing, or demeaning comments;
- Jokes that reference a protected characteristic;
- Slurs or name-calling;
- Reliance on or expression of stereotypes;
- Non-verbal behavior, such as staring at someone in an intimidating fashion or making inappropriate gestures;
- Express or implied threats;
- Destruction or defacement of an individual’s property or workspace;

- Use of one's physical stature or presence to intimidate or interfere with others;
- Use of one's perceived stature or position within the Company to intimidate others;
- Excluding others or making them feel unwelcome;
- Displaying or sharing offensive images;
- Offensive or unwelcome comments about appearance or personal or physical characteristics; and
- Inappropriate touching or other physical contact.

This list is intended to give examples and is not exhaustive. Other types of conduct may constitute harassment under this policy or applicable law. While harassment generally involves a pattern of behavior, a single act that is sufficiently severe may still violate this policy.

These types of behavior can violate policy even if done in a joking manner and even if no intention to offend exists. Similarly, being under the influence of alcohol or other substances does not excuse behavior that violates this policy. The Company expects its leaders to set an example for others and thus should be aware of their heightened responsibilities to behave appropriately.

Sexual Harassment Prohibited

Sexual harassment falls into two categories:

- Requesting or requiring sexual favors or romantic acts or attention as the basis for an employment decision or in exchange for favorable working conditions or other benefits (often called "quid pro quo" harassment); or
- Conduct that has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an employee's work performance or of creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment due to or based on sex or gender (often called "hostile work environment" harassment).

Sexual harassment can occur regardless of the gender or sexual orientation of the individuals involved and between members of the same or opposite sex, and it does not necessarily have to be motivated by sexual or romantic desire. An individual can be a victim of sexual harassment even when not personally a target of the harassing behavior.

Examples: Sexual harassment can take the same forms as other types of harassment described above, but also may include:

- Unwelcome sexual or romantic advances or invitations;
- Unwelcome non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, such as leering or making sexually suggestive gestures;
- Unnecessary or unwelcome physical contact, such as touching, massaging or kissing;
- Threats or demands that a person consent to sexual or romantic requests as a condition of employment, to avoid some work-related disadvantage, or to obtain an employment benefit or advantage;
- Sharing or displaying explicit or sexually suggestive objects, images, or other materials anywhere in the workplace, including on any digital device;
- Sexually suggestive jokes, derogatory or sexually degrading comments; or
- Comments about an individual's body or appearance.

This list is intended to give examples and is not exhaustive. Other types of conduct may constitute sexual harassment under this policy or applicable law. While sexual harassment generally involves a pattern of behavior, a single act that is sufficiently severe may still violate this policy.

Workplace Relationships

The Company recognizes that consensual romantic or sexual relationships may exist or develop between employees and does not prohibit them. However, perceived or actual conflicts can arise both during the relationship and after it comes to an end. This risk is greater when the relationship involves a supervisor and a subordinate, no matter how many levels separate them, or when one of the employees can influence or determine the other's working conditions, regardless of whether they work in the same department. In these situations, the employee with greater authority or influence must report the relationship when it begins to Human Resources, and the other employee is encouraged to report the relationship as well.

Employees in romantic or sexual relationships that do not involve a disparity in authority or influence are encouraged to tell Human Resources when such a relationship develops, particularly if they work together. While the Company respects the privacy of its employees, knowing about the relationship allows it to assist in navigating any potential workplace issues that may arise.

Once a relationship is brought to the Company's attention, it will work with the employees to address any potential issues, including any actual or perceived conflict of interest. In these circumstances, the Company may change reporting relationships, transfer one or both of the employees to another position, or take other steps designed to address the situation.

BULLYING PROHIBITED

Bullying occurs when an individual behaves in an intimidating, hostile, or abusive manner toward another, regardless of whether it is based on that person's membership in a protected category. While bullying generally involves a pattern of behavior, a single act that is sufficiently severe may still violate this policy. Like harassment, bullying may be verbal, physical or environmental.

REASONABLE ACCOMMODATIONS

Disability Accommodation

The Company is committed to equal employment opportunities for qualified individuals with a known disability and provides reasonable accommodations in employment to any qualified individual with a disability. The Company provides, and is ready and willing to discuss reasonable accommodations for any such individuals to allow for the performance of the essential functions of their jobs.

What constitutes a reasonable accommodation may depend on many factors including, but not limited to, the nature of the individual's disability and the essential functions of the position.

Religious Accommodation

The Company respects the religious beliefs and practices of all employees. The Company provides and is ready and willing to discuss reasonable accommodations for an employee's sincerely-held religious beliefs or practices.

Individuals can request an accommodation due to their disability or religious beliefs from their HR representative.

COMPLAINT PROCEDURE

Raising a Concern

An individual who believes they have observed, heard of, or been the subject of a violation of this policy should report their concern to the Company as soon as possible.

The Company provides several channels for raising a concern:

- Your Human Resources representative (see attached Appendix A)
- Your immediate supervisor or another Department Head
- A Line Producer, a Unit Production Manager (UPM), or an Executive in Charge (EIC)

- A member of the Fair Employment Practices Team: (fairemployment@nbcuni.com)
- Visit the web portal at www.ComcastNBCUniversalListens.com
- Call 1-877-40-LISTENS (1-877-405-4783)

Employees have the option to remain anonymous when reporting a complaint to the Comcast NBCUniversal Listens Helpline or Web Portal. An individual is not required or expected to raise a concern to the supervisor or other employee who has engaged in the discriminatory, harassing, retaliatory, or bullying behavior. Employees are encouraged to bring forward any concerns they may have about a potential violation of this policy in order to allow the Company to perform a prompt and thorough investigation and to promote its efforts to ensure a respectful working environment.

In addition to using NBCUniversal's internal complaint procedures, outlined above, certain state and local agencies provide resources and reporting channels. A list of these resources, along with additional location specific information, is attached as Appendix B.

Should you wish to use a complaint form to report a sexual harassment concern, please refer to the attached Appendix C.

Supervisor and Non-Supervisor Responsibilities

Supervisors (individuals to whom at least one other employee reports) are expected to lead by example and to ensure that the individuals they manage comply with this policy. A supervisor who witnesses an interaction that may violate this policy, who otherwise suspects or becomes aware that the policy may have been violated, or who receives a concern about potential discrimination or harassment, must report it as soon as possible through one of the channels listed above. This obligation exists even if no complaint is made, the conduct is not directly reported to the supervisor, or an individual who raises a concern requests or insists that the matter not be reported.

The Company encourages all non-supervisors to raise situations they see or hear about that may violate the policy, even if they are not directly involved or affected. Keep in mind that everyone can play a role in promoting a respectful working environment. Without receiving reports about potential concerns, the Company may be unable to take appropriate action.

INVESTIGATIONS OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS OF THIS POLICY

The Company promptly and thoroughly investigates concerns raised regarding potential violations of this policy. The purpose of the investigation is to consider the facts and circumstances surrounding the complaint and take appropriate action based on the findings. Examples of actions that may be taken include training or coaching, counseling, impact to compensation, verbal or written warnings, suspension, and termination of employment.

While each investigation is different, the investigator typically will attempt to interview both the individual who raises the concern and any individual accused of wrongdoing. Others also may be contacted if, for example, they may have information or materials that could help the investigator reach a conclusion. Employees are required to participate when called upon, and they must be open, honest, and complete in their responses to any questions from an investigator. Written notes may be taken, but making an audio or video recording of the meeting is not permitted. If, after an interview, an employee remembers additional details that might assist the investigator, the employee should contact the investigator to provide that information. Participants in an investigation will be treated professionally and with respect throughout the process.

While the Company cannot guarantee absolute confidentiality regarding an investigation of reported concerns, those Company representatives who are involved will keep it confidential to the extent possible, consistent with the need to conduct a thorough and fair investigation and, as appropriate, resolve the concern. Confidentiality is often necessary to advance the Company's legitimate and substantial business interests in protecting the integrity of the investigation, including ensuring fairness to everyone involved, preventing potential retaliation, and protecting to the extent possible the privacy of individuals who have brought forward concerns to the extent possible. When the Company has reasonable grounds for believing these conditions exist, it may ask individuals who participate in an investigation to keep it confidential, and these individuals will be expected to follow such requests, except as described in the section below regarding communications with government agencies.

Consistent with the effort to maintain confidentiality, ensure fairness, and avoid retaliation, the investigator may not be able to answer certain questions about the investigation or share details about the conclusions the Company draws.

RETALIATION PROHIBITED

The Company strictly prohibits retaliation against any individual who, in good faith, raises a concern (internally or to an appropriate government agency or tribunal) about, or otherwise opposes, discrimination, harassment, retaliation, or other behavior this policy prohibits, even if the concern proves to be unfounded or the investigation is inconclusive. The Company will not tolerate retaliation against any individual who participates in good faith in the handling or investigation of a concern conducted by the Company or an appropriate government agency or tribunal. The Company also prohibits retaliation against an individual who requests an accommodation in good faith. Prohibited retaliation includes threats of discharge, demotion, suspension or other adverse employment action, or other harassment or intimidation as a result of reporting a concern or participating in an investigation as described above.

Any concern that an employee has experienced retaliation should be reported as described in the complaint procedure above. The Company takes all complaints of retaliation seriously and investigates them promptly and thoroughly. Any employee who engages in retaliatory conduct is subject to disciplinary action, up to and including termination of employment.

COMMUNICATIONS WITH GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

Nothing in this policy is intended or will be interpreted to restrict you from filing a charge with any governmental agency responsible for administering anti-discrimination laws, such as the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (“EEOC”), or labor laws, such as the National Labor Relations Board (“NLRB”). You are free, without company authorization, to report to, communicate with, and provide assistance or non-privileged information or documents to the Securities and Exchange Commission (the “SEC”), the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (“OSHA”), the NLRB, the EEOC, and any similar state or local agencies. The Company will not retaliate against you for any of these activities or require you to waive any monetary award to which you might be entitled from the SEC or OSHA. Further, nothing in this policy will be read or applied to restrict employee rights to engage in conduct protected by the National Labor Relations Act, including, but not limited to, the rights to discuss wages and other working conditions with co-workers and raise work-related complaints.
